Dear PhD candidates and supervisors,

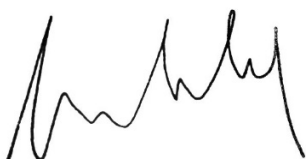

Radboud University's Executive Board has decided that financial support will be provided to PhD scholarship holders with a foreign scholarship who meet the following criteria: (1) they are currently in their 4th (last) PhD year, (2) they are facing problems/delay due to COVID-19, and (3) they do not receive any additional support from their scholarship agency. The financial support consists of €1190 per month, with a maximum of three months. If necessary, insurance costs can also be financed.

The faculty is expected to cover 50% of this sum. The Faculty Board has decided that for applications that meet the criteria, the faculty will provide these 50%.

To apply for this financial support, you should use the form provided by the International Office (please download the form on Radboudnet and provide the information as requested; please note that applications are only eligible if they meet all criteria mentioned on the form). The form should be filled in and signed by the supervisor. It also requires the signature of the head of department (labelled as "director research group" on the form). Subsequently, the supervisor needs to send the form to the Vice-dean of research (the Dean currently acts as the Vice-dean of Research). Once you have a positive decision from the Vice-dean via email, you should submit the application to the International Office as specified on the form.

In addition, Radboud University support can help in requesting an extension of your residence permit. Please be aware of all eligibility requirements for the extension of your residence permit. For a timely request of such extension, your application for this fund is due between three and six months prior to the end date of your residence permit. For technical questions about this RU financial support or extension of your permit, please consult this website or the NSM HR department.

Yours faithfully,
