** Networking is an important aspect of academic life, but at days like the Donders-NIN day it most often happens during the breaks. However, even then in many cases you only talk to people you get introduced to, already know, or the person standing behind you waiting for lunch. Therefore, we would like to give early career researchers the opportunity to take part in this speed dating session, to allow you to connect with many other participants in a short time frame and talk about what drives you in doing research and/or your personal life. And it will provide an excellent opportunity to practice and refine your elevator pitch! Please bring an object with you, that characterizes your research, or you as a researcher to open up the conversation. The rest of the day you will have the opportunity to follow-up with people with whom you had an interesting discussion.
