European Human Rights Protection

Radboud University
The Council of Europe has been able to achieve innovative systems of effective protection of human rights at a regional level. Its success in promoting respect for civil and political rights, first through the establishment and progressive development of an enforcement machinery under the European Convention on Human Rights and then through the entry into force of the European Convention for the Prevention of Torture or Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment, is without parallel.

There are three key approaches to the work of the Council of Europe: standard-setting, monitoring of implementation of state obligations, and co-operation with member states and non-governmental organisations.

While this course will focus upon the jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights, these other aspects of human rights protection will also be introduced and discussed.

The Council of Europe has also been mindful of the need to promote social cohesion through the promotion of social standards under the European Social Charter, and to encourage equality of treatment of members of national minorities through its Framework Convention for the Protection of National Minorities and the work of the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance. All this will be considered from three different areas of particular interest in this course: protection of physical integrity, religious liberty, and aspects of personal autonomy.

After this course you are able to

- Understand the enforcement machinery under the European Convention of Human Rights
- Critically evaluate the leading jurisprudence of the substantive guarantees of the European Convention on Human Rights
- Gain a basic awareness of other European instruments and standard-setting bodies in the field of human rights
- Analyse European human rights problems and identify the applicable rules and legal issues
